1. Sohu.com Inc. (SOHU.O) - Game marketing expenses cause a decline in margin; maintain "Neutral"

[Mike Chen] On Oct. 28, 2013, Sohu released the results of the third quarter of 2013. Sales grew 29% YoY to US$368 million, while online advertising, search and online gaming grew 60%, 53% and 7% YoY respectively. Given serious decline in margin due to $53 incremental game marketing expenses in Q4, we lower our 2013/2014 EPS forecasts from $2.42/$2.97 to $1.48/$2.44, TP from US$64.7 to US$61.4, and maintain "Neutral" rating.

Earnings forecast. Because of rapid growth in video and search business and significant increase of marketing expenses of game business, we raise our sales forecast of 2013/2014 from US$139.8 million/US$161.4 million to US$140.1 million/US$165.2 million and lower 2013/2014 EPS forecast from $2.42/$2.97 to $1.48/$2.44.

Valuation Using DCF, we derived the company's fair value of US$61.4 per share, corresponding to P/E of 41.5x FY 2013 and 25.1x FY 2014.

2. PetroChina (00857.HK) - 3Q13 core profits improve on burgeoning energy reform

[Michael Yuk] PetroChina's 3Q13/9M13 results show a strong quarterly rebound in core earnings with all segments posting better results. This comes on the heels of a more liberalized refined product pricing mechanism and a natural gas price hike. We believe this momentum will continue to pick up during 4Q13 and carry on into FY14. Maintain Buy.

- 1) E&P quarterly profits bounced back along with crude oil prices 3Q13 realized crude oil price was USD98.58/bbl, up from 2Q13 trough of USD97.92/bbl, which led to a 15%QoQ increase in operating profits to RMB48.2bn. 9M13 operating profits fell 10%YoY to RMB147.0bn due to lower crude oil prices throughout FY13. Production remained steady at 1039.4mmboe, up 4.3%YoY. E&P profits will remain subdued to crude oil price changes, which have YTD declined 1.3%YoY versus one year ago.
- 2) Refining books quarterly profit but chemical losses widens Refining operations turned profitable during 3Q13, generating an operating profit of RMB2.44bn after recent price adjustments, but chemical's losses widened to RMB6.59bn. Overall, refining & chemical losses shrank 46.5%YOY to RMB20bn during 9M13. The rebound in PetroChina's refining profitability has been slower than its rival, Sinopec, since its refineries are older. Going forward, we should continue to see greater improvements in refining & chemical margins, especially when the government rolls out NS4 (Euro 4) gasoline standards and China's economic recovering boosts chemical profitability in 2014.
- 3) Natural gas profit accelerates on price increase 3Q13 natural gas profits (ex. one-off items) increased 26.0%QoQ to RMB1.55bn, growing faster than the 12.3%QoQ increase during 2Q13. PetroChina's natural gas business has made an operating profit of RMB3.89bn during 9M13, which confirms the turnaround in profitability that we observed during 1Q13. The market liberalization efforts seen during 2H13 will only continue in 2014 and higher natural gas profits should reflect the policy changes.
- 4) Valuation We have not changed our earnings estimates. Given that the stock is currently trading at the bottom of its historical trading range, we still believe that the risk-reward looks attractive for the stock, with stable dividend yield of about 4%. Target price remains at HK$10.55/share based on our FY13 EPS of RMB0.71/share and historical mid-cycle valuation of 12.0x earnings.

3. Sinopec (00386.HK)-Earnings growth to come from new fuel standards

[Michael Yuk] Sinopec's 3Q13/9M13 results slightly beat estimates after refining showed stronger results. Refining will continue to be the company's main earnings driver in FY14 as the rollout of NS4 (Euro 4) fuel standards increase refining margins. Maintain Buy.

1)Results review Sinopec's 3Q13/9M13 turnover rose 7.2%YoY/5.7%YoY to RMB724.68bn/RMB2.13tn with net profit rising 20.1%YoY/22.1%YoY to RMB22.01bn/RMB52.30bn, representing an EPS of RMB0.189/RMB0.451 per share. EPS was 11% higher than the expected RMB0.169/share.

2)Refining profits should moderate in 4Q13 Profits from refining operations, which surged to RMB6.4bn during 3Q13 was the key reason for the earnings surprise, as moderately increasing crude oil prices allowed the group to capture excess profits above its purchase cost, due to a one-month transportation lag. Refining profitability was at RMB14.92/bbl, the highest since 4Q10. We should expect this to normalize at about RMB5.00/bbl during the 4Q13.

3)New fuel standards will expand refining profitability Next year's rollout of NS4 (equivalent to Euro 4) gasoline fuel standards followed by the diesel rollout in 2015, should increase Sinopec's refining margins over the next two years since most of the capital expenditure required has already been spent during the upgrade to the current NS3 standard. Management expects that it will be able to completely capture the RMB290/tonne premium for gasoline and RMB270/tonne premium for diesel after the rollout.

4)E&P exploration intensifies Current exploration results have been better than expected with dryhole expenses dropping 23.0%YoY to RMB9.36bn in 9M13, despite E&P capex increasing 17%YoY to RMB41.24bn. Capital spending has primarily been to develop tight gas in the south Ordos region, and Yuanba and Daniudi gas fields. These efforts will ensure that the company can sustain the double digit growth in natural gas production, which reached 486.34bcf (+10.9%YoY) during 9M13.

5) Valuation We have not changed our earnings estimates. We continue to give 15% premium above the stock's historical mid-cycle valuation of 7.3x earnings to reflect increased crude price pass through. We maintain our target price of HK$7.20/share, which translates to 8.4x our FY13 EPS of RMB0.680/share. Maintain "Buy".

1. The Third Plenum - what are we expecting?

[Ding Anhua, Oct. 31, 2013] A distinct feature of China's political cycles is that the "policy programs" of a new administration are not unveiled until after the new leadership is officially formed. The Third Plenum of CPC Central Committee has special significance in China's political cycle. To quantify the length of the "political honeymoon" of China's new administration, it should be around 200 days, or about twice as long as the U.S. counterpart. More than 200 days have passed since the government succession was completed in March. Therefore, in my view, the Third

Plenum will represent the end of the "honeymoon period." Now let me present my observations on the economic policies of the new government.

The first set of issues is centered around economic restructuring amid the overcapacity problem. This is an old issue, involving a series of key questions such as the relationship between economic growth and restructuring. It is not difficult to observe that the new government takes a clearly different approach to this issue compared with the previous administration. First, the new leadership has fully recognized the long-term trend of economic slowdown. Second, it is more patient about the negative output gap, or even more tolerant of a fast slowdown of economic growth. Third, President Xi Jinping has said China would rather see a slowdown of economic growth in order to proceed with structural reforms. The No. 1 priority of structural reforms after the Third Plenum will be the elimination of outdated or excessive production capacities.

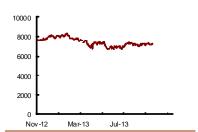

The second set of issues is related to local government debts. This problem, which has drawn much attention, involves fiscal reforms and the shift of local governments' functions. According to Premier Li Keqiang's remarks on fiscal reform, the new administration will adopt a strategy covering the following aspects: (1) Proceeding with budget mechanism reform to increase the government's fiscal trustworthiness. (2) Activating existing money. (3) Transforming government functions.

The third set of issues is related to the hot issue of market-oriented interest rate reform, which involves overall financial reform, the emergence of shadow banking and the full convertibility of RMB. I believe that the core issue of this process is the establishment and perfection of the central bank's interest rate tools. Interest rate is one of the most important monetary policy tools of the central bank. To proceed with market-oriented interest rate reforms, it will be crucial for the central bank to find a benchmark (anchor) interest rate policy as interest rate regulations are being scrapped. I have three suggestions on this regard: (1) Further improving the financial infrastructure with the key task being a major development of the interbank market. (2) Setting up the policy framework for an interest rate corridor, and locking short-term (overnight) interest rate fluctuations in a certain range. (3) Establishing a prudent supervision system that complies with the requirement of market-oriented interest rate reforms.
